MAY BE BOYCOTT OF TRADESMEN

Presumably with a view of withdrawing their trade from merchants of Honolulu who employ skilled Asiatic labor, the Federated Trades of this city, at a meeting held last Friday night, passed a motion whereby a bulletin will be kept posted in the headquarters of the Federated Trades, of names of all merchants here who employ such labor, copies of which will be sent to all the labor unions and to the Builders' Exchange.

The meeting was fairly well attended by representatives, most of the unions now organized here being represented. The passage of the motion means practically that all merchants and firms employing Japanese and Chinese who are skilled in such trades as carpentering, stone masonry, plumbing, painting, bricklaying and plastering, requiring a considerable degree of skill, are to be placed under the ban as being inimical to the interests of organized white labor. The passage of the motion was practically unanimous, indicating that all the unions are of a mind in the movement.

Although the committee named for making public the result of Friday's meeting disclaims any intention of a boycott, yet the statement is current that trade is to be withdrawn from firms employing skilled Orientals.

PASSENGERS HAD A THROUGH RIDE

The unbusiness-like manner in which Pain's arks are managed was shown yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock when a car from Waikiki, loaded with passengers who had listened to the band concert at Kapiolani Park, reached King street, at its junction with Waikiki road. The driver alighted and proceeded to detach the horses preparatory to transferring them to the other end of the car. The passengers were told that they would have to take the next car as the driver's time was up and he had to go to the barn. There were a dozen passengers affected by the order and the "next car" which was directed behind, contained seats and standing room only for three. The passengers failed to move and the driver exhausted his logic on them, but they didn't budge an inch. They told him they had paid fares for a through ride, and as they had secured seats, they intended keeping them, and, furthermore, they did not propose under any circumstances to hang on to the side rails of the towward end of the already crowded "next car." The driver finally put the horses on the towward end of the car, telling the passengers that it wasn't his fault that he gave the order to disembark, but his time was up and he was not allowed overtime pay. The passengers melted at this and made up a little purse to recompense him. He was about to place this in the fare box, when he was told he would be mobbed if he gave Manager Pain any further financial assistance. The money was put in his pocket and the car was soon bowling merrily to town.
